

Mint of the United States at Philadelphia,

ASSAY DEPARTMENT,

September 9 1885.

Sir:

In reply to the letter of Timothy Conkline, inquiring why the refining charge was made upon the whole number of ounces, and not merely upon the amount required to be refined to raise the whole to standard, I may state that there is no such provision in our tariff of charges, as relating to Silver purchases.

It is not very often that Silver bullion below standard is of such quality that the refinement of a small portion of it will make the whole mass fit for coinage.

Very Respectfully

Jacob B. Eckfeldt

Assayer

Hon Daniel M. Fox

Superintendent &amp;c &amp;c

NARA RG104, Entry 1, Box 135

Mint of the United States at Philadelphia,
Assay Department,
September 9, 1885

Sir:

In reply to the letter of Timothy Conklin, inquiring why the refining charge was made up on the whole number of ounces, and not merely upon the amount required to be refined to raise the whole to standard, I may state that there is no such provision in our tariff of charges, as relating to silver purchase.

It is not very often that Silver bullion below standard is of such quality that the refinement of a small portion of it will make the whole mass fit for coinage.

Very Respectfully,
Jacob B. Eckfeldt
Assayer

Hon. Daniel M. Fox
Superintendent &c &c